Student #1 (girl)

This picture is about the old times. When there were no cars, no clocks and that type of stuff. I see is people walking and doing their jobs. They are dressed the way people would from a long time ago not in the latest fashion. I think we need to study this because we need to know our country's history.

Student #2 (boy)

I think this picture is about pioneers that have the Hard life. What I see is lots of Hard work having to be done like fetching the water, making clothes dry, and working with horses. I think we need to study this because, We still haven't learned about the first thanksgiving which is shown in another picture I saw today in our social studies book.
